In honor of National Women’s History Month, the Center for Women at Emory presents

An Encore Evening
with Helen Thomas

HELEN THOMAS
UNCOMPROMISING. IRREVERENT. UNPARALLELED.

Known as “the First Lady of the Press,” former White House Bureau Chief Helen Thomas broke barriers for women reporters while covering every president since John F. Kennedy. During that first White House assignment, she began closing presidential press conferences with the memorable words “Thank you, Mr. President.”

For fifty-seven years, Helen was White House correspondent for United Press International. She joined Hearst Newspapers as syndicated columnist in 2000. Helen remains an outspoken and formidable reporter and social critic, whose perspectives on past administrations sheds an invaluable light on present and future American politics and policy.

The most recent of Helen’s four books is Watchdogs of Democracy?: The Waning Washington Press Corps and How It Has Failed the Public.

7:00 p.m., Monday, March 31, 2008
Tull Auditorium of Emory Law School
Book-signing and reception to follow.
Parking is available in the Lowergate South deck.

Cosponsored by Department of Women’s Studies Jessica Glasser Memorial Lecture, Hightower Lecture Fund, Graduate School, Emory Law School, President’s Commission on the Status of Women at Emory, and Emory Alumnae and Women of Emory.

For more information, call 404.727.2001 or email sasha.smith@emory.edu. For a complete calendar of Women’s History Month at Emory events, go to www.womenscenter.emory.edu.